

Gollwitz Manor House

Gollwitz Manor House is a meeting place, where Jewish and non-Jewish people can come together. It was opened in April 2009 after being completely renovated and it offers space for education, meetings, accommodation, conferences and special events.

The house - situated in the village of Gollwitz and east of the town of Brandenburg an der Havel, - is open for groups of different cultures, religions and ages.

Gollwitz manor House sees itself as an educational institution for young people to support the extracurricular work in many areas of study, in particular political science, and bringing young people together. Racism, Anti-Semitism and xenophobia are some of the main topics of our educational work. We also offer training and educational courses for adults.

"The Castle offers a lovely atmosphere and perfect conditions for almost every kind of seminar or event, and is an extraordinary place for overnight stays and group accommodation"
